1	anonymous	Every time I have been to Methodist to see a student, I have witnessed the other staff members, and they all treat the students with respect. The environment there is very positive and conducive to learning and thriving.
2	anonymous	Youth are the future of our Society. We must treat them with respect and without discriminations, so that they may learn to treat others in this same way. With kindness.
3	anonymous	nun adults respect kids thats all i ask for
4	anonymous	everyones equal
5	anonymous	I think the adult attitudes and behaviors should be that when somebody get in trouble once for something they did and they didn't know it was wrong they shouldn't be treated the same way as someone that constantly do that

6	anonymous	i dont konw
7	anonymous	idk
8	anonymous	Youth at our facility have numerous challenges and educators working with our youth would benefit from additional education on how to manage youth's behavioral issues without putting them in the hall or "kicked out". I wish all educators working here could go through the same training our staff receive- Therapeutic Crisis Intervention and CARE program. I do feel educators are working on improved communication and we are as well. Both Mr. Derring and Dr. Franks are working on having the technology accessible needed for students to be able to truly work at the level they need to be.
9	anonymous	I think our teachers are doing a great job
		Adults must remain sensitive to the developmental and emotional needs of students; not all students are the same, and should be treated individually
10	anonymous	without judgement; although we don't have females, there is a distinctly observable difference in the treatment of individual students, especially on a behavioral level.

1	anonymous	CPSB staff practice all of the above to ensure a positive environment on campus. However, we do not have any control over the Boy's Village staff and we often disagree with their treatment and reactions from the Boy's Village Staff.
2	anonymous	I think that there doing good we don't have all of them problems
3	anonymous	yes
4	anonymous	Students here have often had trauma and backgrounds where they have not had supportive and respective attitudes and behaviors modeled and have not learned the Golden Rule. Our work here is focused on helping them overcome the negativity that has been ingrained.
5	anonymous	For the most part, I do agree with the statements regarding students' attitudes toward other students. However, there are occasional issues with students' interactions in these regards.
